3. [redacted] Called Jay Sourwine, Counsel, Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, to say that [redacted] could be made available to a congressional committee early in the year. However, we would wish the appearance to be in executive session, particularly in order to ensure [redacted] Sourwine said he fully understood this and was most appreciative. I pointed out [redacted] had his own ideas and would probably not accept guidance as to what he would say. Sourwine said this would pose no problems. I then said the one major question was of the prior claim of the House Committee on Un-American Activities for [redacted] appearance. I suggested Sourwine himself might want to contact the staff of that Committee to see if they could work out a mutually acceptable arrangement. Sourwine was not receptive to this, remarking that if they had the first claim he would defer to them, but would like to get a crack [redacted] as soon as they are through if they had not already covered the matters of interest to the Senate Subcommittee.

I told Sourwine I would let him know as soon as arrangements with the HCUA had been worked out.

8. [] Talked with Chester Smith, General Counsel, House Committee on Un-American Activities, and advised him that we were reviewing the possibility of [] appearance before the Committee in executive session. I told him that in the near future we would be in touch with him again to work out the details. I suggested that we have a knowledgeable person such as [] (who talked with Smith earlier this year) review the areas of [] knowledge with the Committee staff and perhaps they would want to have a staff conference with [] before making final decisions about his appearance. Smith was pleased to hear this and said he and the Committee staff would cooperate in every way in making the necessary arrangements. I told Smith that Jay Sourwine, on the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, had recently contacted us and requested that [] be made available to that Committee but we had informed Sourwine of HCUA's prior claim based on their contacts with us earlier. I suggested that if the two committees wanted to get together on this, it was perfectly agreeable with us and that Sourwine might contact him in this regard. Smith said he would talk with Sourwine if he called. 25X1
